RE: Trooper Corruption

Hi, my name is Keith Moyer I've been charged with a crime I did not commit.

I can prove the Troopers Office tampered with the evidence in my case. I would like to set up a meeting with someone in your office, to go over this evidence.

I've included a State DNA lab worksheet and a picture of the swabs taken at Wildwood Pretrial.
Just in case you my have some doubts about my evidence.
The picture of the DNA swabs on the table, are from discovery in my case.
There are 3 swabs in the picture and only 2 swabs make it to the State DNA lab.
Planted evidence!

I can tell you why this could only be done by the Soldotna Troopers.

Regards, Keith

Mike:

The Governor's website is up now. I think what was tripping visitors up was when you first go to gov.state.ak.us you get the recent press release and if you don't scroll all the way to the bottom it looks like this is all there is on the site.

If you closely, at the very bottom of that press release in small print is a note that if you want to go to the old website to click here. I suggested to Karen and Kami that that make this note about 3 times larger in print size and put it at the very top of the press release so people navigating to the website can see it and right away decide to click on it and go to the Governor's website.

I think this would help significantly. Please let me know if you want that done.

I can make arrangments to have that link moved up further so that you can see the link.

Its very difficult to explain in an email everything that transpired during the Governor's announcement for V.P. I got a call at 6:00 am from the D.C. office that the Governor's Office website might be down due to the announcement on C.N.N. I got to the office shortly after 7:00 and the server appeared to be stable but, the pages were loading slowly. I called Enterprise Technology Services to request that GCI open up all the band width for us. They did and I then called other staff at ETS to see if we could put up an alternate page to take some of the load off of the server. Our server was getting hit so hard we couldn't even get to it ourselves. About 15 IT staff came over from ETS, Brian Duncan our contractor, Peter Torkelson, Eric a contractor came over from Wostmann. We sent guys back over to ETS to build servers 3 of them, Peter then worked to convert the Governor's bio from PHP code to plain HTML text because it was causing problems how it handled the hits. So we knew people were just wanting to know about the Governor. So we got that going and moved over to 3 new servers over at ETS but, that took the load off our servers so we could bump up connections. Peter had to reuild his PHP code back to HTML which made many of the links broken. While the servers over at ETS where publishing the Governor's bio we built another server in our office that would take the hits before the Governor's web server so that it would cache the pages which means it wouldn't hit our server everytime it could grab what was in memory. We worked on that until 11:00 that night. We then came back the next day and redirected the www.gov.state.ak.us back to our server and have been monitoring it to see if it can handle the load which we think will get hit even harder come Tuesday morning. Peter will continue to work on the site to convert all the PHP code back to HTML so that all links will work. Remember when Florida servers had a melt down because of the Election we had the same for the State of Alaska with the announcement. Many departments said there pages also got hit harder. This was big news and most servers aren't built to handle that kind of volume. We did everything we could to get it back as fast as we possible could. I'll make some calls tonight to fix that link or see if we can even post it on the page so that we don't even have even have it like that anymore.

Thanks
Kami

Is there a way Alaska could be in the forefront of helping hurricane victims from a private sector and non-profit perspective?

I'm thinking of our faith community to provide relief efforts; our transportation companies to provide containers, planes, and helicopters; and, perhaps, our electrical workers (IBEW??) to restore power. How do we (you?) call them to action and where do we plug them into so they are deployed efficiently and usefully?? FEMA? elsewhere? Thoughts?

J- as you schedule, keep in mind the Lt. Governor is offering to pick up more of the events and speeches that I can't make, so please tap into him. Cabinet members are equipped to accept some of the invitations too. Thanks for doing so much, all! I'll see you soon- Nizich will be up there tomorrow.
